

There is provided a liquid crystal display wherein a first display region corresponding to a first area on which first pixel electrodes are provided displays an image by light reflection mode, and a second display region corresponding to a second area on which second pixel electrodes are provided can display an image by light transmission mode.